

WHAT SUP

ROYAL BENGAL HEALTH QUIZ WITH THE TELEGRAPH PRESENTED AN EPIC DISPLAY OF WIT AND KNOWLEDGE

Presented by Calcutta Talking Club, Royal Bengal Health Quiz, in association with The Telegraph was held on December 7 at The Bhawanipur Education Society College. The event brought together quiz enthusiasts from diverse age groups, creating a vibrant atmosphere of curiosity and camaraderie. The preliminary round witnessed participation by 49 teams, each eyeing a spot in the finals. Six top teams qualified for the finals after a rigorous 16 rounds, in which the teams tackled tricky questions, demonstrating their knowledge and quick thinking. The quiz was helmed by quizmasters

Aanton Mookherjee, Samrat Sengupta and Samanway Banerjee. The final round kept the audience on the edge of their seats. Each team comprised two players who showcased remarkable coordination and expertise. The competition was fierce, with every question raising the stakes and pushing the teams to their limits.

The quiz highlighted the importance of health awareness and knowledge engagingly and interactively. It was not just a test of intellect but a celebration of wellness and informed living. Glimpses.

Suchismita Malty

(t2 intern)

Pictures: Arijit Ganguly

Dr Aakash Roy (right) and Saswata Acharya won the quiz with 95 points, beating opponent teams convincingly. "We are extremely happy. With such a strong field and so many stalwarts of Calcutta quizzing, it felt exceptional to win this health quiz. We hope this quiz becomes an annual affair," said the winning team members.

The preliminary round saw participation in huge numbers by two-member teams of college students, professionals and others in a jam-packed auditorium.

Dr Ujan Sen (second from right) and Arunodoy Chowdhury (centre) bagged the first runner-up position with a tally of 90 points. "We were a last-minute put-together team that just went there to enjoy the quiz. Participating in the quiz was an honour in itself. Qualifying for the finals and even getting to the podium was the icing on the cake," said the duo.

Dr Soubhadra Chakrabarty (second from right) and Dr Partha Ghatak (centre) bagged the third position with 85 points. "It felt really great to take part and have a podium finish at this prestigious health and lifestyle quiz. The quiz was well conducted with a unique blend of medicine and health and popular culture related questions," said the duo on winning the second runner-up prize.

Dr Amit Ghose, founder-member of Calcutta Talking Club, with the three winning teams after the prize distribution ceremony. "Calcutta Talking Club organised Royal Bengal Health Quiz as part of a health awareness initiative amongst the general public. The quiz had nearly 50 teams and encouraged the young population to be interested in health. We intend to get them addicted to health awareness. Looking at the great response, we wish to go national next year," he said.

Many moods from the cut-throat final round of the quiz as participants racked their brains and discussed answers to score maximum points for the ultimate spot. The finals consisted of four rounds with negative marking for incorrect responses.